

TOMORROWA LOOK AHEAD FROM THE NATION'S CAPITAL*UPROAR
AT THE CIA

The resignation of the CIA's No. 2 man, Deputy Director John McMahon, is just the overt side of the covert turmoil inside the agency. Intelligence insiders say McMahon was fired and that Director Casey was behind it. Administration aides accuse McMahon of leaking inside information to Congress and the press, but behind the accusations is McMahon's long resistance to Casey's plans for more covert aid. McMahon had hoped to survive as the agency's conscience, but that only put him at further odds with Casey. Casey's commitment to Reagan has offended CIA professionals dedicated to nonpartisanship, but it gave him the leverage to oust McMahon. The new deputy director, Soviet expert Robert Gates, is more enthusiastic about backing anti-Marxist "freedom fighters," but he will meet opposition from the agency pros. Many of them are now expected to leave "the company."
